Our Founder

Walter J. Brown was a journalist and a broadcast pioneer who built and chaired what would become Spartan Communications, Inc., one of the larger privately held TV companies in the country.

Early in his career, Brown had an office in the White House when he served on the staff of Secretary of State James F. Byrnes. Brown's enduring love for politics was eclipsed only by his respect for Jimmy Byrnes. Inspired in part by Byrnes's philanthropy – which in 1948 established the James F. Byrnes Foundation – Brown created his own private Foundation in 1970. Named for Thomas E. Watson and J.J. Brown, the men to whom Brown attributed his success, the Watson-Brown Foundation today continues to ensure that hundreds of deserving students are provided the opportunity to excel at the college of their choice.

OUR MISSION

The Watson-Brown Foundation, through creativity, diligence and financial support, labors to improve education in the American South by funding its schools and students, preserving its history, encouraging responsible scholarship and promoting the memory and values of our spiritual founders.

A CHANDELIER TO REMEMBER

BY BARBARA HYDE

It never fails. When giving a tour to a large group, someone will inevitably pull me aside and whisper, “Do you know the story about the chandelier?” never fails. When giving a tour to a large group, someone will inevitably pull me aside and whisper, “Do you know the story about the chandelier?”

The story of May Patterson Goodrum’s entry hall chandelier goes something like this: When she sold the house in 1958 to Mary Rushton, May allegedly donated the entry hall chandelier to the Atlanta Art Association, which held a charter for a museum collection housed in Harriet “Hattie” High’s home on Peachtree Street. May’s generosity necessitated a new chandelier be purchased, and Mrs. Rushton apparently chose a large confection in Baccarat crystal. Mary Rushton’s daughter, Wight, was to live with her at the home. Wight, a character known around town for her outrageous antics, was home the day the new chandelier was being installed. Whist one electrician was standing on scaffolding 20” in the air and wiring the centerpiece, there was another man standing on the first floor holding a rope and pulley to take the weight off the wiring. From her bedroom door at the top of the stairs,

long cigarette holder with lit cigarette in hand, Wight proceeded to wander down the staircase, in full dishabille – not a stitch of clothing on her! So stunned at the sight of a naked woman, the man holding the rope promptly let go and was consequently knocked unconscious by the Baccarat chandelier! Needless to say, Mary went shopping for another.

May Goodrum's entry hall chandelier

As with most stories passed down by oral tradition, I always take the narrative with a grain of salt. While there is some truth to it – May's original chandelier disappeared at some point prior to her selling the home and Mary Rushton did replace it – there is no evidence that any chandelier hit the floor of the entry hall. But this begged the question, where is the original chandelier now?

The answer is, I have no idea! A request to the High Museum of Art to search their donation records yielded no answers. The chandelier was possibly used in the new building constructed in 1955 to house the growing museum collection before moving to the High Museum's current location. But early museum records are spotty, and a donated chandelier may have been treated not as a treasured art object, but rather as a useful item to add to the visitor's experience.

After an unproductive search for a chandelier that was similar in style to reinstall in the entry hall, it was decided to recreate the original as closely as possible. Headed by Chadwick Carswell of Chadwick Carswell Lighting in Atlanta, the project began with a careful study of the three black and white photographs we have in our collection. We chose Remains Lighting Company in Brooklyn, New York to manufacture the new piece. We are still in the process of tweaking the shop drawings and making changes, but soon, the new chandelier will re-light the space. Hopefully, the ghost of Wight Rushton won't make an appearance on the stairs during installation! ■

SANDY ABDELNABI

JUNIOR, UNIVERSITY OF SOUTH CAROLINA COLUMBIA

The highlight of my academic year was getting the opportunity to study abroad for a Maymester. I was afforded the opportunity to travel to Paris, where I saw monuments and exceptional sights that I never thought I would see due to financial hardships. Thanks to the Watson-Brown scholarship easing the pressure of my semester bill, I was able to have this extra opportunity to travel to other countries. We took an African American Studies course, and learned about the history of African migrants, artists, and entrepreneurs in Paris.

SATHVIK BODEPUDI

JUNIOR, UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA

I learned an overwhelming amount about balance this past academic year. With ambitious goals of conducting cardiovascular research, starting a Master's program in Multidisciplinary Biomedical Sciences, and nailing that 4.0 semester, I also participated in the organizations and activities that brought out a more fun and entertaining aspect to my student life. I was a competitive dancer on a collegiate Bhangra style dance team, while also representing my university at important city-wide events as a UAB Ambassador. Furthermore, I helped give back to the community and embark on personal journeys of improvement and dedication to service. The year also culminates with the participation in the Presidential Honors Research Fellowship at UAB. Despite the seemingly overwhelming number of endeavors I am pursuing, they all bring a sense of purpose and gratification that keep me going and excited for whatever is next in store!

TRUMAN BRABHAM

SENIOR, UNIVERSITY OF SOUTH CAROLINA AIKEN

My junior year was by far the most challenging but certainly the most rewarding I have experienced during my college journey. I had to take very hard classes both semesters as part of the rigorous engineering curriculum. These classes allowed me to grow tremendously in the areas of academia and self-discipline. Furthermore, I was able to become much more involved on campus during my junior year of college. I was able to hold leadership positions in the Engineering Student Association and Baptist Collegiate Ministry clubs on campus. As a result of my work from this past year, I have the amazing opportunity to be president for both amazing organizations for my senior year of my undergraduate journey. Like last year, I was fortunate enough to have the opportunity to return to Savannah River Mission Completion and work as a mechanical engineering intern in Design Services. I am enjoying this rewarding internship and could continue working remotely with the company throughout my senior year. Lastly, I was able to become involved with undergraduate research and am going to continue this amazing journey into this next academic year. I am looking forward to my senior year as being one of hard work and dedication to finish my undergraduate journey.

SHANIYA CLEMENT

SENIOR, FISK UNIVERSITY

Junior year was really challenging for me. I primarily took major-related courses because I transferred many of my required electives from high school. I didn't perform as well as I had hoped this year, but I am happy that I passed and will be a senior.

I had many great opportunities throughout this school year, such as participating in an internship with HCA Healthcare IT in the Fall and Spring, Thurgood Marshall College Fund CNA/Guidewire Innovation Challenge, Thurgood Marshall College Fund The Pitch Competition, and a Summer internship with Google as a software engineering intern. I joined Iota Phi Lambda Sorority, Inc., and campaigned and won SGA Vice President for the upcoming school year. This school year, I laughed, cried, and made more friends along the way. I am very grateful for the Watson Brown Scholarship for helping alleviate financial worries while I pursue my academic career, allowing me the space to explore these opportunities.

TONY GRAY

JUNIOR, ABRAHAM BALDWIN AGRICULTURE COLLEGE

So far, this was one of my hardest semesters of college, but I learned so much about myself and the field

I'm going into. Because of how much work I've put in, credit-wise, I'll be a junior next semester despite it only being my third semester at ABAC. In this semester, I've had a plethora of outdoor experiences while studying dendrology and orienteering. My class and I trekked through various woods to learn how to identify trees and improve our navigational skills. I was far more successful with learning about trees, but I definitely learned more about orienteering!

had the opportunity to study Spanish, shadow in a variety of specialties, and volunteer. After completion of the program, I began studying for the MCAT. Those six months of studying taught me resilience like I've never known before, tested my boundaries, and reminded me of the amazing support that I have in friends and in family. I completed the MCAT in January, then had what felt like all the time in the world doing the things I love! I completed my departmental honors thesis in biological sciences at Clemson University, where I researched the effects of diet on the oral microbiome. My abstract was also accepted to be presented at the national American Society of Microbiologists Conference this June. I attended Clemson gymnastics meets, went paddleboarding on Lake Hartwell, and started running more. I even traveled, going as close as Greenville and as far as Vietnam. I was accepted to complete an internship this summer in language interpretation, and I am currently in the process of applying to medical school. I can't wait to see what the future holds for me!

RYOCHI JIMENEZ

SENIOR, COLLEGE OF CHARLESTON

Junior year, they say, is often the toughest year in one's college career. This rings true for me, as I navigated through one of the most demanding academic careers yet. Balancing rigorous 18-credit-hour-semester with the demands of two jobs and a weekly commitment to research at the Hollings Cancer Center at the Medical University of South Carolina for 10 hours a week proved to be a quite a challenge. Despite obstacles I faced within and beyond the classroom, I am proud of the accomplishments I

HALEY HUYNH

SENIOR, CLEMSON UNIVERSITY

This past year has been a huge milestone in my academic career. Last summer, I completed my study abroad program in Oaxaca, Mexico, where I achieved throughout this academic year. Earning my place among the Dean's List for both the Fall and Spring semesters stands as a testament to my dedication and hard work. Additionally, being awarded as the sole recipient of the Hispanic Studies Study Abroad Scholarship to enrich my semester-long experience in Buenos Aires, Argentina was a significant honor. This scholarship and this program will not only enrich my academic journey but will also offer a unique opportunity to immerse myself in the vibrant culture of Buenos Aires, Argentina as I transition into my senior year as an Honors student at the College of Charleston. Not only will I step foot in South America for the first time, but I will have this invaluable opportunity to deepen my understanding of Spanish language and culture within the medical context – an endeavor that complements my studies as a Biology and International Studies double major, with a minor in Spanish

This summer, I will be diving back into research at the Hollings Cancer Center at the Medical University of South Carolina, only this time as a participant of the Summer Undergraduate Research Program (SURP). In addition to my research commitments, I will be interning with Lutheran Services Carolinas as an ESOL tutor for families in the Charleston community, dedicating five hours a week to this endeavor.

Also, I will be gearing up for the MCAT and putting together my application for the Fulbright Scholars Program. It is quite a busy summer ahead of me. However, as I reflect on the challenges overcome and the achievements attained this past year, I am filled with gratitude for the growth and opportunities that have come my way. This journey has shaped me in profound ways, preparing me for the adventures and challenges that lie ahead in my senior year and beyond.

WANGQING KONG

SOPHOMORE, UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA

My first year at UPenn was fruitful. I was most actively involved in the UPenn Outdoors Club, Chinese Calligraphy Club, the Silverman Fellows, ASPIRE, and research at a lab. During the spring semester, I planned and led a 4-day, 100-mile bikepacking trip in the Pennsylvania Grand Canyon (may or may not have gotten a minor concussion). I also received 3rd place in the Wharton Undergraduate Healthcare Club's (WHUC) Incubator competition, a healthcare entrepreneurship contest for undergraduates. Furthermore, I was published in the Penn Review, the oldest continuously published and premier literary magazine at UPenn. Overall, I made a lot of friends, had a lot of fun, and learned so incredibly much not only from the classrooms, but also from my peers. I had a great first year! Currently, I am getting EMT certified, and hope to continue pursuing the pre-med path.

CHARLOTTE LEROY

SOPHOMORE, GEORGIA INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY

I have so enjoyed my first year at Georgia Tech! I began as an International Affairs major, but I later switched my major to Business Administration with a concentration in Strategy & Innovation on a pre-law track. Within the first semester, I joined Greek life and the Student Alumni Association where I met some great friends and mentors. I then was admitted into the First Year Program Cohort where I had the opportunity to meet and forge relationships with successful entrepreneurs from Georgia Tech. I am continuing with my classes for the summer as a part-time student and working at a restaurant in Atlanta, while also pursuing volunteer opportunities at the Georgia Justice Project and Atlanta Legal Aid, a nonprofit organization that focuses on providing pro bono legal services for low-income families. I am also looking forward to receiving news about a potential internship for the upcoming fall at a local law firm. Outside of academics, my friends and I go on hikes, see concerts, and love cooking together, and I am so excited to move into my first apartment in the fall! I cannot wait to continue with my time at Tech and see where it takes me!

FOLSADÉ LOGAN

SENIOR, AUGUSTA UNIVERSITY

This past year could be best described as a wild ride. A lot has happened these past two semesters. From working in one of Augusta University’s biology labs, to managing several upper-level science classes. I’m currently working on my thesis, which involves fruit flies. I’ve been gathering data since last fall and won’t be finished until the end of this next fall semester. I can’t say this past year was perfect, though. There have been many ups and downs, and even now, I still find myself trying to manage the overwhelming nature of the pre-med track. Besides that, and to emphasize the best part of this past year, I went on a study-abroad trip to Italy! We visited Rome, Florence, and Siena and learned about art history and how their cultural identity is infused into some of their more famous pieces. Each day was more enjoyable than the last. From visiting cathedrals and museums and learning about their traditions, to eating some of the best local cuisine. Though the subject of the trip was nothing STEM-related, I figured it would be a great opportunity for me to broaden my horizons and experience a different culture. I’m so glad I went, as I’ve gained so much depth and clarity about what I want to do. In the medical field, understanding and respecting the many differences between yourself and those of your potential patients is essential. As someone who loves learning about people, this study abroad trip heightened my desire to connect more with people from all walks of life. I’m in the home stretch now, so I want to make the most of my senior year at Augusta University. I plan on taking the MCAT soon and will savor this last year as an undergraduate while looking forward to what’s next for me.

NICHOLAS MARTINEZ

SOPHOMORE, SCHOOL OF THE ART INSTITUTE OF CHICAGO

So far, I have experienced and learned tons of amazing things during my time at SAIC in just one year so far. I’ve really benefited from taking advantage of all the different field trips, clubs, and events that they host from time to time. I’ve gotten the opportunity to go to major attractions in Chicago for free such as the museum of science and industry and the museum of Mexican American art. I also got to do fun things I couldn’t do back home such as going to a bunny café (picture included!). Academically, I’ve created a lot of meaningful relationships with my teachers in ways that I couldn’t have done back with my teachers in high school. They have offered me all kinds of valuable feedback and advice on my artworks and practice. My comics professor was impressed by my final comic/ final project and told me that I exceeded in constantly breaking his expectations as he read through it. He said that I was a natural at it and said it would only get better if I continued with that medium. Hearing those types of feedback really helped encourage me to push on with my work and experiment more. I genuinely can’t wait for next semester!

ASHLEY ORLET

SENIOR, UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA

My junior year of college has been all about getting comfortable and coming into my own. Classes are of course important, but I think the foremost components that have characterized my experience this year have been the connections I have made with others and exploring new opportunities. I have poured a tremendous amount of effort into the Phi Kappa Literary Society, honing skills in logic and oratory and becoming one of our more experienced speakers. Just this Spring, I was a part of my second winning Intersociety Debate Team and was elected to our equivalent of Vice President. I also received my Speaker’s Key, the highest award a Phi Kappa can earn. Through the society I had the pleasure of meeting so many wonderful people, building new friendships and deepening existing ones. Phi Kappa has been an integral part of my college experience and I can hardly imagine what I'd be without it.

However, the one thing from this year that has been essential in shaping not just my college experience, but also my future, was the Richard B. Russell Security Leadership Program. If I had been asked even three years ago if I ever thought I would step foot in the national security space, I probably would've laughed at the question. Now, here I am, in a program focusing on international, national, and human security, prepping for a career in policy and environmental security. This program has been an incredible opportunity and applying was perhaps the best decision I've ever made. Over spring break, I was fortunate enough to travel with the program to Washington D.C., where we met with members of the State Department, the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, and even the National Security Council. Never did I think I'd stand 20 feet from the entrance to the West Wing after meeting the Deputy National Security Advisor, yet this program allowed us to do that. I have also met some incredible and passionate people through this program, all with visions and drive to change the world. This program has set me on a drastically different path from one I ever anticipated taking, but one I am certainly much better for.

Looking forward, this summer I will be interning with the International Climate Policy team at the Center for American Progress in Washington, D.C. This is a tremendous opportunity, and one I still can't quite believe I get to do. This is an internship working at an important think tank doing exactly what I'd like to do with my career, and I couldn't have achieved this without the Security Leadership Program.

It's hard to believe I only have one year of college left, and it definitely makes me sad to think about. But the future is bright, and I can't wait to see what's next.

YOHANA PERALTA-GALINDO

SENIOR, WOFFORD COLLEGE

This year was chaotic. As the end of my undergrad career is approaching, I have felt the want to do as much as I can to be involved on campus. One of this being studying abroad. For the month of January, I had the incredible opportunity to study in Morocco. It was the most incredible experience of my life. I have not traveled to a lot of places, so this easily became one of my favorite memories. Additionally, I learned so much about the many cultures that live within the beautiful country. This includes traditional Moroccan culture with a mix of French and Spanish culture. The most rewarding part of this trip was the opportunity we were given to see the traditions and livelihoods of Moroccans first hand. We were welcomed into many homes in which we saw traditional food being cooked, to appreciating their prayer hours, and to picking up some Arabic. Equally important, we visited the cities, the farms, the deserts, and the coast of Morocco to learn about different communities within Morocco. Overall, I absolutely loved this experience, and

I really hope to return to Morocco one day.

KEANU RIDGILL

SENIOR, LANDER UNIVERSITY

This semester I was very proud of the way that I finished out the year with all my classes. Some of them required a lot of work and effort in the end to get an A in the class. I was also pleased with how well I performed on the soccer field this semester, getting better in all aspects of my game. This year I learned a lot about myself, and the things that I can achieve through continuous effort and perseverance.

WHERE ON THE FAMILY TREE?

Uncovering the Hidden Ties That Shape Our History

BY ASHLEIGH OATS

As always with research rabbit holes at the T.R.R. Cobb House, our questions just keep expanding, and our research options expand with them. In late 2022, after finding a letter from O.H. Prince to Mary Ann Lamar Cobb (Tom Cobb's sister-in-law) that referred to Mary Ann as "Cousin," we realized that many of the older street names in Athens were named for various cousins of the Cobbs. With help from Gary Doster's 2021 book, Athens Streets & Neighborhoods,

Lamar, South Carolina

and several genealogy websites, we were able to confirm the family connections and created a social media video series called “Where on the Family Tree?” to highlight them. These videos are available on our Facebook and Instagram accounts.

But as always with the extended Cobb families, the research hasn’t stopped there, and we’ve had to branch away from the streets of Athens to piece together a more complete picture. After finding a letter from one of Tom Cobb’s very distant cousins whose last name was Meriwether, we had to dig into their genealogical connection and Meriwether’s potential (and confirmed) connection to Meriwether Lewis of the Lewis and Clark Expedition. It then occurred to us that the name Lewis also appeared on the Cobb family tree several times. As we should have expected, Tom was related to Meriwether Lewis through Col. John Lewis III, Tom’s great-great-grandfather and Meriwether Lewis’s great grandfather. There are many cities and counties named for Meriwether Lewis along the western expedition route.

Another research rabbit hole appeared when reading about Yellowstone National Park and the section of the park named Lamar Valley. As we should have expected, the Lamar Valley was named after Mary Ann’s cousin, Lucius Quintus Cincinnatus (L.Q.C.) Lamar, Jr., who served as President Grover Cleveland’s first Secretary of the Interior. There is also a small town in Darlington County, South Carolina and a county in Georgia named for him.

Although not a geographic place, one of the best-known archaeological periods in Georgia is known as the Lamar period, and covers roughly 1350-1600 CE of the Mississippian culture. The Lamar period was named after the Lamar Mound in Macon, Georgia, which was named after Mary Ann Lamar Cobb’s brother, John B. Lamar, who owned the Swift Creek Plantation where the mound is located. The family sold the land to the federal government in 1936, and it is now part of the Ocmulgee Mounds National Historic Park.

We can’t wait to see where our research finds us next! ■

The Lamar family tree is so expansive ; it can be hard to find the Lamars we need!

THEY SHOT THE SHERIFF

BY FRANKE L. SMITH

In late September 1894, three men boarded a train bound for Sylvania, Georgia. Two of the men were Democrats and one was a Populist. While it is hard to know exactly what was said on the train that day, it was reported that George Bellinger, who was a Democrat and a political leader in the Black community, was discussing politics and offended George Zeigler, a staunch Populist organizer and friend of Thomas E. Watson. Zeigler threatened Bellinger, and Screven County Sheriff L. B. Brooker intervened to defend his fellow Democrat. It is important to note that Brooker's middle name was Bellinger, and some news reports indicated that the Brooker family had enslaved Bellinger, or his ancestors, prior to emancipation. Although Brooker's action to defend Bellinger was atypical for someone in his position, the two could have been acquainted with each other. A physical altercation ensued and was broken up by the conductor. Once the train reached Zeigler Station, Zeigler exited, and the men resumed their argument through the train window. Shots were exchanged, Zeigler reboarded the train with his son, and by the time the scuffle ended, Brooker, George Zeigler, and his son all suffered gunshot wounds, and the elder Zeigler also had knife wounds. George Zeigler would pass away from his injuries a few days later.

While Zeigler's sons pursued charges against Brooker after the death of their father, a grand jury failed to indict the sheriff on any charges, arguing that Brooker acted in self-defense. They instead indicted Sol Zeigler (George Zeigler's son) for assaulting another man on the evening of the initial fight, because it was claimed that man caused the elder Zeigler's knife wounds. The Zeigler boys were not satisfied with this outcome. On Jan. 4, 1895, Bellinger was lynched near his home, and although Sol Zeigler and Willie Walker were indicted for his murder, neither was arrested in the months that followed. As time passed, it appears that tensions between Sheriff Brooker and the Zeiglers continued to intensify as rumors of death threats made by both parties circulated. In October of 1895, Sheriff Brooker and the Zeiglers found themselves attending the same church function. By the end of the event, the two brothers had shot and killed Brooker in front of a rather large crowd of onlookers. No one restrained the young men, and the Zeiglers simply went home. Thus began one of the odder standoffs in Georgia policing history.

To the consternation of the governor and a great many other Georgians, over the next eight months the Zeigler brothers went about their daily lives facing very few consequences. They took to carrying guns on their persons at all times but could be seen on the train and walking the streets of Sylvania on a regular basis. The new Screven County Sheriff, whose duty it was to arrest them, stated that he could not apprehend the two young men on his own as they were armed. The new sheriff was unable to raise a posse to help him, because support for the Zeiglers was great in the community, and he was unwilling to risk his life in the pursuit of their arrest.

As the months dragged on and the press continued to report on failed attempts to apprehend the two young men, the general feeling in the state turned to embarrassment that justice had not been served in the case. The governor raised a reward for anyone helping to capture the Zeiglers which initially amounted to $150 per brother, and eventually reached $500 per brother in January of 1896. Despite numerous attempts by outsiders to find the young men, they continued to elude capture by slipping into the woods when alerted by friends and neighbors that strangers were nearby. One determined detective went so far as to disguise himself as a telegraph lineman to spy on the Zeiglers. His ruse was quickly discovered, and he was run off. In early May, it was declared that anyone found to be helping the Zeiglers evade justice would be fined $250. Eventually, the increasing harassment by reward seekers, and one can imagine, the idea that their friends might now also find themselves in trouble, led the young men to surrender to the local sheriff in May of 1896.

Thomas E. Watson, when he learned of the George Zeigler's death, had a memorial of him printed in The People's Party Paper, and agreed to defend both Zeiglers as they faced judge and jury in November of 1896. The trials were separate, with Sol being called first. Watson and his team allowed the young man to tell his side of the story, and Watson argued in his closing statement that the brothers were in fact acting in self-defense, based on the number of reports they had received that Brooker intended to kill them and the fact that they were told Brooker had rifles in his wagon at the church yard. A very sympathetic jury of their peers acquitted both brothers of the murder of Sheriff Brooker and later acquitted Sol in the Bellinger murder case as well. The general feeling among the Sylvania community was that when the state failed to indict Sheriff Brooker for the murder of George Zeigler, it had failed the Zeigler boys, and that brothers were well within their rights to seek retribution. ■

*Alumni SpotlightHALEY MUMAW

BY TIARA HODGES

PHOTOGRAPHY BY JORDAN ADAMS

Haley Mumaw is now the expert she once admired. Her path to getting here took a little time, effort, and discovery, but her passion for conservation, animals, and the outdoors has always been constant.

Haley's household growing up was no stranger to animals. Her family had fish, guinea pigs, and rabbits. The spark that made Haley interested in caring for nature ignited when her older brother had a pregnant hound dog, and she got the chance to raise and take care of the puppies.

While she would consider herself a bit timid in high school, Haley found ways to expand her perspective and keep busy. She volunteered at a local church, and was in Beta Club, National Honor Society, and Future Farmers of America, which she considers a good outlet. "It's where I found a lot of friends and made connections and pursued interests. My teacher was adventurous."

As a high school student, she also worked in a vet clinic, which helped her transition into her initial major at Clemson: animal and veterinary science. "I loved animals and that was my first career choice," Haley said.

Although animals had her heart and her major, she felt like she was in a rut in 2020, as many during that monumental year. She considered changing her major, but brushed it off, thinking that her interest may have waned because she was taking online classes at the time.

By the time she entered her sophomore year, Haley was no longer enjoying her major. Her brother-in-law, who works for Clemson Cooperative Extension, brought up his colleague Patricia Whitener who worked with 4-H Youth Development. Haley recalled him saying, 'I think that you two would really get along, let me see if she has an internship available for you. She walked by my desk the other day and had a baby alligator in a plastic tub and a basket of chicks.'

Haley thought this prospect sounded fun, and once she joined the internship, a new world opened before her.

"We were on a hike one day scoping things out for a summer camp...and she was showing me all this stuff in nature, and I thought this is so cool. How do you know everything that you know and how do I learn it?" Haley said.

After that experience, Haley looked into wildlife and fisheries biology as a major, which ended up being a better fit for her. She is also passionate about conservation and protecting natural resources, so it seemed meant to be that she was on this path without even realizing it was an initial option and fell in love with it.

Haley stayed in this internship for two years.

While there, she educated students about wildlife, conservation, and natural resources at summer camps and classroom visits. "I fell in love with sharing all this information and I like seeing the dots connect for other people and see that love and light in younger kids."

In her role as District Programs Coordinator for the Greenville County Soil & Water Conservation District, she now focuses more on adult programming. "I really enjoyed taking what I knew and translating it to other people. I found a passion for teaching that to others," Haley said.

She now presents to HOAs and teacher development workshops. Focusing on Greenville County, she develops programs and campaigns to protect the county's resources, including a pet waste campaign that reminds people to pick up after their furry friends to prevent water pollution, and a campaign that encourages people to grow their own food and shop local. It's new territory for her, but she's enjoying it.

As for her future career goals, Haley said, "I want to be a lifelong learner, and I also want to be a teacher of what I know." She and her mentor are now colleagues, and Haley has acquired the knowledge she once held in admiration.

When talking about what led to where she is now, Haley credits her support system. "It's important to surround yourself with people who can offer valuable insight on things when you feel like you have something that you're navigating, like choosing a career."

Her support has come in the form of her family, friends, and faculty, especially as a first-generation college student. And as a 2020 Watson-Brown scholarship recipient, she does not take her opportunities lightly.

"One thing that I try to hold myself accountable to is being grateful for the opportunities I have. Being able to go to college is a huge thing for me. It was a big opportunity I never wanted to waste," Haley said.

While discovering her career path, Haley admits she struggled with tying her identity to a job or career. She later began to change her perspective. "Once I detached a little bit and tried to discover the things that were important to me, [I realized] who I am is not my job, that doesn't change anything about my character and who I am as a person, and those things are valuable to me."

When she made this shift, she asked herself what opportunities does this new perspective open up for her, and what different paths are available when she does not restrict herself.

"The driving force for me in high school was fear and wanting to build a strong life for myself, and then [I grew] into being pushed from a place of passion instead of fear, and so much more came out of that," Haley said. ■
